Friday FAQ's: Friday February 12, 2016 Acknowledgement & Support

The goal of Friday FAQ's is to create a lighthearted, easy way to relay sometimes confusing information to the public. However, today we are taking a detour to address, acknowledge, and show our support for the officer's that have given their lives in the line of duty.

Just 43 days into this year and 10 officers have died in the line of duty. Of those 10, 7 occurred in the month of February. Of those 7, 5 officers were killed within a 24 hour period.

One of the questions we often get asked by the public is how can they show their support for these officers and their families. There are two national organizations that one can donate to and know their money is going to helping the families of our fallen officers: Concerns of Police Survivors (C.O.P.S) and the 100 Club. These are non-profit organizations that provide benefits and support to the surviving family of first responders. Both organizations have a strong history of showing immediate and necessary support to these families during their time of need. To learn more about these organizations, you can visit their websites which are listed below:

No amount of sympathy, condolence, or support can ever take away the pain and grief of losing a loved one, but knowing that you will have the emotional and financial support to take care of your family helps in moving through this daunting process.

Our thoughts, prayers, and wishes for peace go out to the many family, friends, and agencies that have lost their loved ones.
